

It All Began Three Hundred Years Ago

On the grounds of The Pines in Chelsea, a giant oak tree grows. Estimated by the University of Michigan to be 300 years old and purported to be the oldest in Washtenaw County, the venerable old oak is the main focal point of the courtyard at The Pines.

In the interest of preserving this magnificent natural wonder, The Pines was designated and built to encircle and protect the handsome old tree. Current residents of The Pines, as well as those for decades to come, will enjoy the beauty and wonder the old oak provides as it transforms through the seasons of Michigan's climate.

In addition to the oak tree, a variety of pine trees, wildlife and flowers flourish on the grounds of The Pines. A natural pond is rumored to have once been a great fishing spot for local children. Today it provides a lovely view from the front of the building while attracting a variety of waterfowl for residents to observe and appreciate.
